A New Innovation of Bridge Training Program: Internationally Trained Medical Doctors (ITMD) Post Graduate Training Program at Ryerson University

International professionals often come to Canada with a breadth and depth of experience and credentials that simply aren't recognized here. Unemployment and underemployment are common stories for international professionals. The Gateway for International Professionals programs, offered through Ryerson University's G. Raymond Chang School of Continuing Education, are helping bridge the gap between education, experience, and employment.

Under the Gateway professional program initiatives, the Chang School of Continuing Education is proud to offer a bridging program for internationally trained medical doctors for non-licensed health care jobs in Ontario. This unique post graduate learning opportunity has been specially designed for internationally trained medical doctors, dental surgeons, and clinical public health professionals. The bridge training program provides the additional skills needed for participants to gain employment in health research and health management positions in Canada as an alternative to medical doctor licensing.

Dr. Marie Bountrogianni is Dean of The G. Raymond Chang School of Continuing Education at Ryerson University in Toronto, Ontario, Canada. As a former Ontario cabinet minister, Dr. Bountrogianni served as minister of a number of portfolios including Intergovernmental Affairs, Democratic Renewal, Children and Youth Services, and Citizenship and Immigration.

Dr. Shafi Bhuiyan is Distinguished visiting professor at Ryerson University and an Assistant Professor at the University of Toronto's Dalla Lana School of Public Health. Dr Bhuiyan also co-founder and program lead of the innovative Internationally Trained Medical Doctors (ITMD) Bridge Training Program at the Chang School of Continuing Education, Ryerson University, which provides ITMDs with training to transition into non-licensed health care positions.
